Water and Waterways Management in the Roman Empire

18 - 19 July 2019

Raeburn Room, The University of Edinburgh, Old College
From 09.30

About the event:

The strategic management of water resources was central to both urban and agricultural development in the Roman world. This workshop will bring together historians, archaeologists, and lawyers to discuss the ways in which Romans exploited and managed water resources from an interdisciplinary perspective.

This event is closed to the public, however we welcome expressions of interest.
